

Paul Livesley

Non-Executive Director (Trustee)

Paul is Headteacher of Lathom High School in Skelmersdale.

He is father to four children, three of whom are still in the primary phase and with one at high school. In addition to his school role at Lathom, Paul is Chair of Governors as a Local Authority Governor at an Ofsted Outstanding primary school and is also Chair of the Strategic Partnership Board at Edge Hill University; roles that enable him to maintain current knowledge and highly relevant experience to bring to the Trust.

Paul is committed to ensuring the very highest academic standards for all learners, driving inclusive practice at all times and has a very strong sense of fiscal responsibility for school finance. Paul has a keen interest in all aspects of training and developing teachers and believes that all children and young people should be taught by excellent, committed teaching staff and supported on their school journey with outstanding pastoral care. He is dedicated to partnership working between schools and across phases and is an advocate for life-long learning to ensure constant development and improvement.
